Class shapes up bodies and souls

By Kimberly Heinrichs

The women swing their hand weights while a singer belts out "I thank God I was born again." They do leg lifts to the strains of "I will rejoice in Him."

It's aerobics with a difference.

But the Christian rock background and the post-exercise devotionals are not the only differences at the Foothill Baptist Church's thrice-weekly aerobics classes.

There is no meat-market atmosphere popularly associated with trendy fitness clubs. Gone also is the competitiveness sometimes found in all-women clubs.

These women are buddies. "I really like the camaraderie," said Kathy Berg of Upland, adding that class members sometimes have salad get-togethers apart from the class.

The members credit instructor Codean Holmes for the friendly atmosphere of the class.

"I've been to a lot of programs, but Codean's is the best," said Barbara Clingwald, who has lost 20 pounds in the seven months since she joined the class. "It gets me away from TV at night and from the refrigerator."

Shirley Jones, who at age 55 is one of the older members of the class, first joined after seeing it listed in the church directory during a service. Although she never exercised regularly before, she was inspired, so to speak.

Class members say the Christian influence is important, but it's the exercise that keeps them coming back to Holmes' exercise class.

"I just thought that I needed it. I know my body needed it," she said.

From younger women in tourquoise spandex to older women in stretch pants and blouses, Holmes makes them feel at home.

"It's a hard class, but I always stress to people to do what they can," Holmes said.

Holmes uses both Christian and secular rock music for her routines, but she screens the secular lyrics ahead of time so no one will be offended. Non-offensive dress also is encouraged, she said.

"We're not allowed to wear the two-piece things that your tummy hangs out," she said, noting that there are no other restrictions.

The class is attended by those of all faiths — Baptist, other Protestants, Catholics — as well as those who may not necessarily practice a religion.

The women enjoy the prayers after the exercise, but most

Water managers optimistic despite drought

By Kathy Hall

Managers from three local water districts don't foresee a major West Valley water shortage even though state water experts said the winter that just ended was the driest since the big drought of 1977.

Until recent storms increased levels of aqueducts and reservoirs, state water reserves were reported to be critically low.

"We aren't going to run out of water," said Mike Teal.

The director of public services in Ontario said his city's underground water basin levels are "not low."

Natural water sources in Fontana are also keeping pace with demand, according to Bruce Cash of the Fontana Water Company.

Lytle Creek and groundwater wells are at normal levels, he said.

"We don't foresee a shortage.

This area is growing rapidly and we are keeping pace with the development by planning and by developing new sources of water," the manager added.

But a memorandum from state water resources experts has Cash concerned.

"It says this summer will be critical. When they issue a directive, we should stop and take a look," he said. "We are always concerned about conservation and we try to communicate that to the public."

Water officials in Cucamonga are also concerned about saving every drop.

Wells in the Cucamonga water basin are down 80 feet, according to George Blanchard of the Cucamonga County Water District.

The department is responding by lowering pumps in half of their wells and by encouraging water conservation.

"We don't foresee any drastic water shortage, but the big thing is, let's conserve what we have and don't take any chances."

Blanchard said droughts come in fairly predictable cycles.

"We are heading that way again. Historically, we go through these wet and dry cycles every 11 years," he said.

Based on that theory, he predicted that 1990 is likely to be "the bottom end of the dry years."

agree that the aerobics are the main drawing card. "It's part of it," Jones said of the religious overtones. "It's nice, but it's the exercise that brought me." □

Stars come out at Bear Gulch School in R.C.

By Mike Krapfl

*Starlight, star bright
The first star I see tonight
I wish I may, I wish I might have the wish I wish tonight.*

One wouldn't have guessed it, but the stars beneath the canvas dome sitting in Bear Gulch Elementary School last week were perfect for wishing.

The 30 first-graders packed inside, however, were too overwhelmed by the portable planetarium's display of 3,000 stars to even think about wishing on any of the stars let alone the first they had seen.

As the students gazed heavenward, Robert C. Moheit's booming voice explained: "The stars you see are the stars you'd see at 8 p.m. in the middle of the Mojave Desert."

He then began his 30-minute introduction to astronomy that he presented to every Bear Gulch student last week.

"The red stars you see, are like your grandfather," he told the open-mouthed youngsters.

"They're older stars that have been around awhile," he said.

"The blue stars over there," he said while pointing to a cluster of stars with his flashlight pointer, "are like your younger brother."

"Those stars are young and will be around quite a while longer."

Moheit then pointed out a few yellow stars and said, "Those stars are like your parents — middle-aged."

A middle-aged star — like the sun — is about 5 billion years old, Moheit said.

After explaining how the ancient Greeks had used their imaginations to identify and name the night sky's 48 constellations, Moheit gave the children a lesson in navigation.

North, he said, can be found by first finding the Big Dipper.

Once found, he said, follow the two stars that make the outside of the dipper's ladle.

The star they point to, he said, is Polaris. Polaris, the North Star, is true north.

Council commits to improving southwest Rancho Cucamonga

After residents lined up to plead for a share of the ever-shrinking federal community block grant pie, the Rancho Cucamonga City Council committed itself to improving southwest Cucamonga recently.

The council, however, stopped short of deciding where next year's allotment of $215,000 committed to the area will be spent.

Last year, the council told residents of Sierra Madre Avenue and Placidia Court north of Arrow Highway their streets would be priorities for Block Grant funded improvements.

At last week's meeting though, residents of Calaveras and Sierra Madre avenues south of Arrow Highway told the council their area should be the priority.

Councilwoman Pamela Wright, who teaches in southwest Cucamonga's Los Amigos Elementary School, said the area has the potential "to be a real thorn in the city's side if something isn't done."

The council agreed, but delayed until April a decision on where to start improving the area's streets, gutters, curbs and sidewalks.

INS will open application centers in area

The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service has announced plans to open amnesty application centers in Pomona and Riverside on May 5.

The two centers will be at 960 E. Holt Blvd. in Pomona and 1285 Columbia Ave. in Riverside.

Undocumented aliens eligible for amnesty may pick up and turn in the applications for amnesty at the centers, said INS spokesman Joe Flanders.

Redevelopment Agency raises tax revenue limits

By Mike Krapfl

To keep projects like a proposed regional shopping center alive, the Rancho Cucamonga Redevelopment Agency raised the agency's tax and bond revenue limits at a special meeting last week.

Jack Lam, Rancho Cucamonga's community development director, said, "We're at the limits already, so to continue projects we've got to amend the redevelopment plan."

According to the amendment, the agency's limit on bond-generated revenue was raised from $50 million to $500 million.

The agency also raised its tax-revenue limit from $11.25 million to $100 million, according to the proposed amendment.

Lam said the changes are necessary because the 1981 cost estimates of the agency's current projects "were quite low."

The proposed changes in the redevelopment plan though, will not change the agency's priorities, Lam said.

"We haven't changed the projects at all," Lam said. "We're just updating our funding program to carry out the agency's goals."

The agency's primary goal is to redevelop southeast Rancho Cucamonga (roughly the area south of Foothill Boulevard between Archibald and Etiwanda avenues).

To do that, the agency is funding improvements of the area's flood control facilities, roads and bridges.

The agency's most visible project is Victoria Gardens, a proposed regional shopping center.

Ground for that shopping center, however, isn't likely to be broken by the end of this year, Lam said.

The agency and the center's developer, a partnership of Ernest W. Hahn Inc. and Foothill Associates called HFA Associates, had agreed construction of the 1-million-square-foot mall should begin this year.

Lam said expansion of Montclair Plaza, however, has made the developer and department stores hesitant to build the proposed mall until more people move into the Rancho Cucamonga area.

Nonetheless, Lam said two department stores — Broadway and the May Co. — have committed themselves to opening stores in a Rancho Cucamonga mall by passing up opportunities last year to expand their Montclair Plaza stores.

Lam refused to speculate how long the companies might delay construction of the proposed center.

The agency is assisting the center's developer by providing land purchased by the city.

Accidents puzzle officials in R.C.

Traffic fatalities increasing sharply

By Mike Krapfl

A sharp increase in fatal traffic accidents on the streets of Rancho Cucamonga has sheriff's deputies and city officials puzzled.

Last year a record 14 people died in accidents on the growing city's streets. So far this year, six people have been killed.

Sgt. Ron Ufkes, the sheriff's deputy in charge of traffic control in Rancho Cucamonga, said Thursday, "I have no idea why we've had so many (fatal) accidents this year."

"I can tell you, though, the captain here has been asking me the same question," he said.

Ufkes said eight fatal traffic accidents in a year would be the average for a city the size of Rancho Cucamonga.

Paul Rougeau, the city's traffic engineer, said he couldn't explain the sharp increase in fatal accidents either.

"We have to try to find a pattern to establish causes," Rougeau said. "There are no patterns in these accidents."

There has never been a pattern in the fatal accidents of Rancho Cucamonga, he said.

Although stymied by the apparent lack of a pattern, Rougeau and Ufkes said they're not about to stop looking.

"It's certainly a serious problem," Ufkes said. "We're going to search our collective minds to see what we can find and what we can do about it."

One thing sheriff's deputies are going to do, Ufkes said, is tighten enforcement of traffic regulations.

"By pulling over even one car with expired registration, maybe we can prevent the next of these accidents," he said.

Rougeau said the increase in accidents is cause for concern, and worthy of extra enforcement measures.

He, however, wasn't sure how effective extra enforcement might be.

Traffic signal cleared

The California Transportation Commission last week approved installation of a traffic signal on Foothill Boulevard in Rancho Cucamonga, as well as 51 other highway construction projects statewide costing a total of $57 million.

Paul Rougeau, Rancho Cucamonga's traffic engineer, said the signal should be working at the intersection of Foothill and Turner Avenue by November.

Rougeau said the city and the state will split the signal's $119,000 bill.

Reponse slow on homeless services survey

By Patrick McGreevy

Cities are having a difficult time getting responses to a survey on the services available to the homeless in San Bernardino County, members of a task force said recently.

As a result, the task force has had to delay its plan to incorporate the responses into a directory to be used by social service agencies, said Mike Bair, an analyst for the San Bernardino Associated Governments (SANBAG).

SANBAG is the agency sponsoring the task force on the homeless.

The survey seeks information on shelter, food, health care and other services available from churches and social service groups.

Most of the 17 cities in the county given questionnaires failed to respond to the task force by last week's initial deadline, according to Susan Chow, an administrator for the city of San Bernardino.

And those cities which sent their questionnaires out to churches and social service agencies have received little response, said Ontario staffer Ginny Dadaian.

Of some 200 questionnaires sent out by the city of San Bernardino, approximately 20 responses were received, Dadaian said.

Besides providing an inventory of services available, the surveys are expected for the first time to give county politicians a fix on the number of homeless people, Bair said.

Chow said the task force formed a subcommittee last Tuesday to press for responses from the cities.

Weaving as art form featured at museum

By Paula Monarez

In 1111, King Henry I began the Scottish woolen industry on the River Tweed between England and Scotland.

Five hundred years later the first American mill and weaving establishment was built at Rowley, Mass.

For thousands of years weaving was the only way most people acquired their clothing.

In 1816, power looms were installed in the United States, but only five percent of the population wore clothes made in a factory.

But the advent of the Industrial Revolution in 1900 changed all that. Spinning and weaving vanished at home.

Today weaving is no longer an essential part of housekeeping. Rare is the home where a loom can be found.

It's an art form.

Artists use a blend of old and contemporary styles to create beautiful weaving and fiber pieces.

Currently, local residents have an opportunity to witness several examples of this art form at the Museum of History and Art in Ontario in the "Shuttles and Fibres" exhibit.

The exhibit, which will be on display at the museum for six months, includes numerous pieces (some dating back to 1,600 B.C.) many done by local artists, said Lou Ann Svenson, curator of the exhibit and director of the museum.

Svenson began working on the exhibit a year ago.

After searching and calling local artists for weave and fiber art, the curator realized she had a great exhibit on her hands.

"These pieces are truly beautiful," Svenson said. "There is so much to be learned from weaving."

Some of the pieces include a 7-foot macrame figure done by Ginger Jolley of Rim Forest, a tapestry piece done by children ages 4 to 8 and a white-woven Freya coat, which is a woman's short woolen shirt from the Danish Bronze Age. The coat is a duplication of one found on a perfectly mummified woman uncovered in the bogs of Denmark several year's ago, Swenson said.

Several examples of tapestry

also are included.

In addition to the numerous art pieces, the exhibit includes several looms, such as Navaho, treadle and inkle, and spindles.

There also is a chronology on the history of weaving, Swenson said.

To kick off the exhibit, the local chapter of the Embroiderer's Guild of America set up a needlepoint, embroidery and other types of needlework display.

The museum is located at 225 S. Euclid Ave. It is open from 1 to 5 p.m. Thursday through Sunday.

Two county economic departments to merge

SAN BERNARDINO — Two county departments dealing with economic development will be merged, following a recent vote by the county Board of Supervisors authorizing the move.

Supervisors also voted to restructure the county's Economic Development Commission, reducing its membership and further focusing its authority.

Both changes were in response to a report last October that questioned the effectiveness of the current system, according to Deborah Barmack, a senior executive analyst with the Board of Supervisors.

Under the approved proposal, the county's Economic Development Department and its Housing and Community Development Department will merge to form a Department of Economic and Community Development.

The HCDD's director, Tom Laurin, will be the director of the new department. Laurin will report to the supervisors in 60 days on ways to reduce funding and staffing without reducing services.

Barmack said that the county is continuing its EDD contract with Joe White and Associates for marketing the county to developers and businesses.

By placing White's contract under the jurisdiction of Laurin's new department, county officials hope the marketing effort will be better coordinated with the HCDD's function, which is to provide technical and financial assistance to expanding or relocating businesses.

In the past, White's contract was administered by the 15-member commission. The proposal would reduce the commission to seven members, at least two of which would be members of minority races.

Family opts to continue dead daughter's battle

Cystic fibrosis claims life of 3 children a day in U.S.

By Suzanne Sproul

Every day three children die of cystic fibrosis in this country and every day five others are diagnosed with the disease.

And when Dixie and Larry Snapp had their fourth child, Jennifer, the deadly aspects of the genetic killer entered their lives. After struggling with the disease for almost a decade, 10-year-old Jennifer died last April 12. But her family has decided to continue the battle.

The Snapps and friends Shirley Guengerich and JoAnn Fitzgibbons are coordinating a Cystic Fibrosis Foundation fund-raiser tonight at the Red Lion Inn in Ontario. A dinner and fashion show is scheduled at 7 p.m.

"I never noticed the fashion show was almost a year from when Jennifer died. We made all the arrangements and then someone mentioned it to me.

"People ask me if working with the CF foundation is hard since Jennifer died. It isn't. What bothers me is that she isn't here any more and I think about that almost every day. We're hoping to fill the room with 600 people for this show. If this fund-raiser helps the public become more aware of cystic fibrosis than we have accomplished what we wanted.

I'm still involved with this organization because other children still are dying," Mrs. Snapp said.

Mrs. Snapp will briefly discuss cystic fibrosis during the show. "But it won't be very long because this is supposed to be a happy fund-raiser," she said.

The Rancho Cucamonga mother noticed something was wrong with her young daughter shortly after birth. The child had a persistent cough. The mother said she hoped it simply would go away. But it continued and she decided to have her daughter tested. The tests showed the 6-week-old baby

Local schools see trouble in new bill

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Local schools would find it difficult to take advantage of a proposed law that would reduce class size.

The Senate Education Committee approved the bill offering schools extra state funding to reduce the student-teacher ratio to 20-1 in English, math, science and social science classes.

But the Chaffey Joint Union School District would be hard-pressed to benefit because it lacks extra space for the students siphoned off from the classes, Associate Superintendent Dean Smothers said.

At an average ratio of 28-1, the district's nine schools would have to find extra classrooms and teachers for approximately one-third of the students from each of those classes, Smothers said. Otherwise it could not participate in the program, he said.

Although the state would pay $75 million for the first year of the program, the 1988-89 school year, and about $600 million when the program is fully implemented after eight years, there is no guarantee it would pay for extra classrooms, Smothers pointed out.

"The concept is excellent. But it would only work if there were sufficient numbers of teachers, if there were sufficient numbers of dollars and if there were sufficient facilities," he said.

On the other hand, Fontana Unified School District's one high school, which has a 30-1 ratio in academic classes, would probably take advantage of the program, Superintendent Anthony Lardieri said.

"If we could get down to 20-1,

I would find the room somehow," Lardieri said. "It would really give the teachers a chance to have the kids write and not be buried by paperwork at the end of the week."

When he first started at the district more than 10 years ago the ratio was 40 or more students to a teacher, he said. As the class size has shrunk, the California Assessment Program scores have gone up, he said.

Other principals agreed that the smaller class size would allow greater individual attention and increase the productivity of students in those basic courses.

But Upland High School Principal Glenn Fisher, whose school's ratio is particularly high at 29.9-1, said the larger class sizes don't hinder the school's test scores. While he favors the program, he pointed out that the Upland campus — particularly with next school year's added burden of unification — has no room to grow.

Since the cost of living increase for the 1987-88 school year doesn't meet current standards, Smothers said it is possible current programs could be cut to fund this new one.

"I support the idea, but we need to have the programs we already have on the book funded," he said.

The program might also cause morale programs among teachers instructing other classes, Chaffey High School Principal David Stine said. Foreign language, shop and business classes would not be included, he said.

"The philosophical concept is that these (English, math, science and social science) are more important for language or other courses," Stine said.

R.C. searching for replacement on commission

Residents interested in planning Rancho Cucamonga's future have until Friday to apply for a Planning Commission seat being vacated by David Barker.

Aspiring planners can submit applications at the city clerk's office in City Hall, 9320 Base Line Road, Suite C.

Barker will resign his appointment as the commission's chairman at the end of this month because of other responsibilities, according to a letter of resignation dated March 2.

The City Council will review all applications for Barker's seat and make an appointment "as soon as possible," said Mayor Dennis L. Stout.

Fire engineer delivers baby in pickup truck

Engineer Ralph Deslauriers still is grinning about last Thursday, one of his best days on the Ontario Fire Department. He delivered a baby in the front seat of a pickup truck.

"It was my first one. ... It was a boy," he said.

Official reports were unavailable that night and Deslauriers said he was too elated (and too busy at the time) to have noted many specific details.

A Pomona couple were reportedly on their way to a Riverside hospital at 6:30 a.m. when they apparently ran out of time, Deslauriers said.

Fire Capt. Steve Holtrist said the woman's name was Martha Aguilar, and that she was ready to give birth to her second child, but the father's name was unavailable.

Deslauriers said when he and firefighter Mark Edison arrived, the truck was parked in front of a telephone booth on Milliken Avenue between the Pomona (60) Freeway and Riverside Drive.

"It's gotta be the only one (phone booth) within five miles of that place," Deslauriers noted.

The woman was definitely in labor, he said. "Contractions were something like every minute and a half." He said he and Edison donned sterile rubber gloves and prepared to deliver the baby as he began nervously recalling the training films he'd seen.

His worries eased a few minutes later, when a full paramedic team arrived and checked with a local hospital via radio.

Then, noting that Deslauriers was gloved and doing fine, paramedic Capt. Joel Denton asked if he'd like to continue with the delivery, under

Hungry to benefit from shoppers' spare dollars

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Next month, while local shoppers wait in line at the check-out stand, they'll be able to donate their spare dollars to those who can't afford to be in the line behind them.

It'll be as easy as buying a lottery ticket.

Lucky Food Centers in Ontario, Upland, San Antonio Heights and Pomona will include certificates for the Food For All program at their check-out stands. Shoppers will be able to pick up certificates for 50 cents, $1 or $5 and the store will send the money off to the Redlands-based non-profit charity.

"It's in very small amounts. Nobody's standing with their hand out. You can do it anytime you're in the store," said Food For All volunteer Stan Mattson, explaining the success of the program.

"What better place is there than a supermarket to help the hungry?" added Nancy Chandler, spokeswoman for the supermarket chain. "This to me seems like the way a real person can feel like they're helping."

Food For All began 1½ years ago in Redlands when Linda Hamilton got the idea while waiting to pay for her groceries at a local supermarket, Mattson said. She and her husband Milan started the program by signing up two stores in the city — including a Lucky's — for a test pilot program. It was expanded to 12 more stores in Riverside and Los Angeles last spring, Mattson said.

Consumers donated close to $6,000 during the 10-week program which went to local food organizations such as Survive Food Bank in Riverside and the Salvation Army, he said. Food For All distributes 75 percent of the money to local hunger programs and 25 percent to national and international programs, he said.

Several independent grocers have been involved, but Lucky's is the only chain to sign up so far, Mattson said.

The four Lucky stores involved since last fall have brought in $159 a week — $59 more than

URA formally enters development accord

The Upland City Council, acting as the Community Redevelopment Agency, formally approved a contract with a developer for the Seventh/Mountain Redevelopment Project Area at a public hearing last week.

Developer Hank Gordon — president of the TRF California Limited Partnership, also known as The Rainier Fund — agreed to deliver a $5,000 deposit as security for the 24-acre project north of the San Bernardino (10) Freeway and east of Mountain Avenue.

Gordon has lined up Vons Pavillion and Home Depot for the shopping center planned there. The city already has granted him a conditional use permit for the project.

Gordon also agreed to buy property formerly occupied by Ole's Home Center and the Department of Motor Vehicles office from the city Redevelopment Agency. The city will be refunded for the $3.15 million it spent to get the property occupied by Ole's and the $1.1 million it paid for the DMV site, according to City Manager Lee Travers.

The council also approved an agreement with the developer to split the costs of the DMV move from its current offices to a new location. That cost should not be more than $90,000 each, Travers said.

The city still is negotiating for properties occupied by Texaco and Chevron gasoline stations.

Alta Loma holds science fair

Move over Tom Edison and Ben Franklin! Here come the Alta Loma Elementarians! Yes, would be scientists and inventors from grades 1 through 6 were in their "elements" March 5, when Alta Loma Elementary held the annual Science Fair along with the first Invention Convention. The 18 winners from a field of 145 projects were announced at the awards ceremony that evening, after an afternoon of difficult decision-making by a bevy of staff judges. All students entering the fair and convention were awarded a participation button, compliments of design contest winners, Amanda Barnes and Tom Von Kaenel.

First and second place winners advanced to district level competition March 12 at Hermosa School. All Invention Convention participants are invited to display their brainstormed at this event also. First place winners are further honored by invitation to the Chaffey College Science Fair on Saturday.

Winners were (grades 1 through 6 respectively):

First place: Aaron Jacobs, Don Gotts Chalk, Juli Grimes, Jason Keebaugh, Kimberly Petronzio, and Kelly Kendrick; second place: Thane Vallette, Brian Talleur, Mariah O'Loughlin, Brian Lawrence, Phil Kuhns, and Debra Ludolph; third place: Garret Parker, Dennis Clements, Tyson Wetzell, Stacey Smith, David Coffey and John Wang.

expected, Chandler said. It is because of that success that the chain is expanding the test program to 60 more stores the first week in April, including those in the Pomona Valley, she said.

During the test program, which runs until June, 100 percent of the donations will go toward food for the hungry, Mattson said. After that no more than 10 percent will go toward administrative costs.

He said the program is inexpensive because it is run by volunteers, with only 20 paid hours a week for secretarial and bookkeeping work.

The program has an added benefit in that it is not competing with local charities, but helping them, he said. A Pomona Valley council is being set up now to help advise on the distribution of local Food For All contributions, he said.

GAZEBOS

Area retail sales outpace state four to one

By Ian Fallis

Retail sales in the Inland Empire increased at four times the state pace in the third quarter of 1986, according to the latest figures from the State Board of Equalization.

And the West Valley had nearly double the increase of the region, the figures show.

From the third quarter of 1985 to the third quarter of 1986, taxable sales in California increased from $52.6 billion to $54 billion, a 2.7 percent increase.

Taxable sales include most but not all retail sales in the state. Food and medicine are among the items not taxed.

In San Bernardino County, sales were up 10.7 percent to $2 billion, and sales in Riverside County increased 11 percent to $1.4 billion.

Those were the only two double-digit gains among the ten counties with the highest sales totals in the third quarter.

Throughout the state, only two other counties recorded gains greater than 10 percent — much smaller San Luis Obispo County and tiny Sutter County.

In the six West Valley cities, sales leaped almost 20 percent from $592 million in the third quarter of 1985 to $707 million in the third quarter of 1986.

Only 14 counties had a higher taxable sales total than the West Valley.

San Bernardino led the county in taxable sales in the third quarter, with a 5.9 percent increase to $375 million.

Ontario had the second-highest total, at $216 million. That was a 9.8 percent gain from the third quarter of 1985. The largest segment of that — $46 million — was from auto dealers and suppliers.

General merchandise stores, building materials and service stations each accounted for about $20 million.

Montclair had a whopping 41.2 percent gain, to $138 million.

Montclair Plaza's expansion apparently played a major role in that, with general merchandise store sales rising from $23 million to $41 million apparel store sales up from $6 million to $12 million.

Upland posted a 12.8 percent gain to $103 million in taxable sales, mainly on the strength of $26 million in auto sales.

Fontana moved from eighth place to sixth in the county at $91 million on a 18.6 percent increase.

anything about the disease or what to expect. CF is a disease not too many people know about. I think it is the worst genetic disease for children," the mother said.

Doctors told the Snapps their daughter wasn't expected to live. The girl was hospitalized immediately, beginning an on-again, off-again relationship with hospitals for the next 10 years.

"When she was in the hospital I visited her every day. We as a family had a bike-a-thon fund-raiser for CF because we didn't know what to do and wanted to do something," she said.

During the years, Mrs. Snapp and her husband learned to serve many of Jennifer's medical needs at home. "I wanted her to be able to spend as much time at home as she could. I was determined not to let her disease run her life. In the end I wanted her to die with us at home, but we always left that decision up to Jennifer. She decided to die in the hospital," she said.

Last Easter a very ill Jennifer was allowed to come home for the holiday. As was the family practice, her father hid Easter eggs around the house for her to find.

supervision.

"I gotta tell you, I hesitated at first," Deslauriers confessed. "But I figured every guy ought to try it just once. I appreciate the guy letting me go ahead with it, it's something that I'll look back on."

Remembering the training films, he reflected, helped a lot. "This one was a picture-book delivery, everything went exactly like it was supposed to."

According to Holtrust, the boy was born at 6:56 a.m. and weighed 6 pounds, 11 ounces.

West Valley Girl Scouts celebrate 75th anniversary

By Suzanne Sproul

As they joined hands and recited the familiar oath, the West Valley's Girl Scouts together celebrated their mutual 75 years of history.

The scouts, from Daisies to Seniors, recently banded together to participate in their own observation of the organization's year-long 75th anniversary celebration. Individual groups — called neighborhoods — joined together Thursday for a promise circle — at the same time as did scouts worldwide.

"The Promise Circle last week was sort of the official kickoff of the 75th anniversary celebration we will be observing all year long," said Sharon Hewitt, Spanish Trails Girl Scout Council public relations director.

Cari La Nier, 13, of Troop 1186 in Rancho Cucamonga represented the West Valley in Washington, D.C.

La Nier stood with more than 2,000 fellow scouts, Girl Scout National President Betty F. Pillsbury and Honorary President Nancy Reagan last week when they recited the promise.

The promise reads, "On my honor, I will try to serve God and my country, to help where I am needed and to live by the Girl Scout law."
